

FSD Intern Profiles

Zoe Fox came to Jatan from Washington, D.C. She will graduate from Northwestern University in June 2011 with degrees in Journalism and Asian and Middle Eastern Studies. While interning at Jatan, she worked on developing a formal curriculum for the youth groups. She loves to travel, take pictures and take chai breaks.

Rena Oppenheimer is from Boston, Massachusetts and a student at Tufts University. She will graduate in 2013 with concentrations in International Relations and Anthropology. At Jatan, she helped to organize rural youth groups by increasing individual attendance and putting together a formal curriculum. She loves to work with children, watch movies, learn about other cultures, and doodle.

Birong Wang is from Shanghai, China and is a rising sophomore in Northwestern University in U.S. She is majoring in sociology and learning and Organizational Change. As an 8-week intern at Jatan, she worked on a project developing a formal curriculum for the youth groups in rural villages established by Jatan. She loves to learn about people from different cultures and work on education.

Sarah Sanders is from Grand Ledge, Michigan. She is a rising junior at Northwestern University studying Political Science and Psychology. While interning at Jatan, she worked on developing curriculum about health, life skills, and social issues for rural village youth groups. She loves to read, run, play the flute, travel, and spend time with her family.

